It should be noted that these data—both in terms of numbers and in terms of contexts and causes of death—remain preliminary and subject to verification. The purpose is to more accurately determine the number of victims, the surrounding circumstances, and to update information on the potential perpetrating parties. The documentation team also faces additional challenges due to the multiplicity of actors, limited access, and the large flow of information, part of which has been misleading or inaccurate. This complexity makes the verification process more difficult and requires additional time and effort.

The Syrian Center for Media and Freedom of Expression (SCM) applies a rigorous methodology for documenting human rights violations grounded in international standards and best practices. This ensures that our documentation adheres to the fundamental principles of documentation, including impartiality, objectivity, accuracy, confidentiality, and do no harm.

Key aspects of SCM's documentation methodology include:

- Information Collection: Our team of documentation officers and field reporters gathers information through firsthand testimonies and open-source investigations.
- Information Verification: Each reported violation is corroborated by at least two independent and authentic sources that our team has thoroughly verified.
- Cross-Verification Process: All collected information, including testimonies, undergoes a comprehensive cross-checking process to ensure accuracy and reliability.
- Victim Identification: Only victims whom we can identify by name are recorded in the SCM data management system and included in our statistical reports. Unidentified victims are not included in these reports, but their information is securely stored until verification and completion are possible.
- Standard of Proof: SCM applies the “reasonable grounds to believe” standard, which requires that there be a reliable and credible basis for concluding that a violation has occurred based on corroborated information.
- Monitoring and Updating the Database: The database is continuously monitored for developments and changes, with new information and elements such as images and videos regularly added. In addition, periodic reviews are conducted to minimize potential errors that may occur during the data entry process.

All figures and statistics presented in this report were retrieved from the database of the Violations Documentation Center (VDC). They are not final and are subject to continuous and periodic scrutiny by the VDC's database administrators and the field documentation team. Figures differ between reports and the most recent report is considered to be the most accurate.

We are very grateful to the members of the Field Documentation Team who risk their lives every day in order to document human rights violations committed in Syria and without whom the publications of the VDC would not have been possible.
